The relationship between composition and structure in the case of γ-Fe2O3 nanostructures is investigated. It is found that the average grain size and the intergranular spacing are negatively correlated with the average iron content in the crystallites. Moreover, for nanocrystalline iron oxides the interplanar spacing and the crystallite size are positively correlated. The γ-Fe2O3 nanostructures are usually composed of grains with a size of the order of 5-10 nm. The relative area fraction occupied by the superimposed nanograins is more than 50%, and in such a case the superimposed nanograins form well-defined layers on the surface. The relationship between the size and the composition of crystallites provides a possibility to characterize γ-Fe2O3 nanostructures in terms of the average grain size and the average iron content in the crystallites.Rep. They'd be downright insulted if you asked them about their weights and their bodies. Do you think most average guys would be able to pull off lifting that much? I know many guys who can deadlift only 60+ or 70. No. The average dude does not have the training of someone like that. It's a fluke. The guy looks great, but I think the trainer is the one who should be celebrating. That's a butt load of weight right there, and that's with a great PR. The guy can be 77a5ca646e
